To Whom It May Concern:

My father, John H. "Jack" Vissers, was a native San Diegan and avid golfer. He took me to Presidio Golf Course when I was 8 years old for golf lessons with Don Abrego. I realize how lucky I was to learn to play at a young age as it I grew to love golf as an adult. It became a tradition in my family for my parents, brothers and myself to meet at Presidio Golf Course on Sunday mornings for a round, and then walk across the street for breakfast in Old Town. The best thing about golfing at Presidio was the more experienced in our group could work on their short game and those of us who only had a short game could have fun and not be left behind. I have so many wonderful memories of golfing at Presidio; it is truly a San Diego treasure and should be enjoyed by future generations.
